DANGER OF ANOTHER DELUGE.

THE NORTHERN HEMISPHERE TO BE SUBMERGED, AND A NEW WORLD FROM THE SOUTH.

(From Galignani's Messenger, Dec. 25.)

We have had occasion to peruse a remarkable work just published, entitled "Courants et Révolutions de l'Atmosphère et de la Mer," by Lieut. Julien, a distinguished officer in the French navy; the greater part of the book is devoted to a general description of Lieut. Maury's splendid theory of currents and winds, by which he explains the recurrence of storms and other meteorological phenomena, but which has chiefly attracted our attention, is a new theory on the inevitable periodical return of a cataclysm similar to that known under the name of the Universal Deluge, a subject which the author treats with singular lucidity, and of which we will here endeavor to give an outline—

The author starts from certain facts, some of which are generally known, viz. 1, that the isothermal lines (lines where the same degree of warmth is observed on our globe) of the highest temperature are unequally distributed between Northern and Southern hemispheres, the space they occupy in the former being the double of that which they occupy in the latter; 2, that the Southern hemisphere is considerably cooler, especially towards the pole, than the Northern; 3, that the accumulation of ice at the Antarctic pole is much more considerable than at the Northern; 4, that the earth performs the shortest portion of its revolution, viz. that nearest to the perihelion, much more rapidly than the other, and at that period of the year which comprises the autumn and winter of the Northern hemisphere. Hence it follows that the winter of the latter is shorter (by about eight days) than that of the Southern hemisphere; and it is during this long winter, when the earth is furthest from the sun, that the ice must lose in strength what they gain in duration. To this cause of diminution of temperature must be added the loss of caloric by radiation, and it will then be easy to perceive the reason of the difference of temperature between the two hemispheres. Observation, moreover, has shown that the quantity of caloric lost at the South pole in the course of a year, is equal to the surplus absorbed at the North pole. Now let us, with the author, mentally represent to ourselves the earth at the moment of its creation, when its whole surface was covered with water, and its centre of gravity coincided with its geometrical centre. From that moment its revolution around the sun commenced, and all those causes which have led to the inequality of temperature between the two hemispheres, began to operate. In the course of a few centuries the ice at the South pole became in consequence heavier than that accumulated at the North pole, and the centre of gravity was displaced southwards; mathematics, in fact, state the distance between the latter and the geometrical centre, to be about 1,700 metres. Under these circumstances, what could the liquid surface of the globe do but flow southward, leaving all the continent we are so familiar with, uncovered? Here M. Julien observes that all the regions of the Southern hemisphere bear unmistakable marks of submergence; that America, Africa and India and in points, and islands towards the South pole. The mountains of the southern hemisphere resemble the appearance of the summits of mountain ranges, and that Lieut. Maury's soundings show that the coasts on that side all descend abruptly into the sea. He further states the curious fact that in going from the North to the South pole, at every parallel the ratio of the extent of land to that of the sea diminishes regularly and progressively.

Let us now take into consideration, the phenomenon called the Procession of the Equinoxes, in virtue of which the first point of Aries recedes upon the ecliptic by about 50 seconds in a year. This gradually causes a complete change in the seasons, counting from any given date, there must elapse at least 21,000 years before the seasons return at precisely the same periods of the year. It has been ascertained that a year in which the first day of winter precisely coincided with the earth's passage through its perihelion, the temperature of the Southern hemisphere had been in constant course of diminution. It is moreover clear that after the lapse of 10,500 years the seasons on our globe must be exactly reversed. Hence, about 10,500 years before our present time, it was the north pole, and not its opposite one, which was in its maximum of refrigeration; our present continents were then submerged, according to the Mosiac tradition of the Deluge, and there were continents unknown to us in the Southern Hemisphere. And again, by the same astronomical and natural laws, 10,500 years after the last cataclysm, a new one will occur, which will again submerge the Northern hemisphere, and allow a new world to emerge from the ocean in the Southern one.

Such is the theory of M. Julien—a theory, we may add, which is in perfect accordance with facts within the sphere of our actual knowledge.

It is confidently believed that the decided triumphs of this SAFE in all places where fully tested, as in Iowa, Wisconsin, in fire, must convince a discriminating public of the folly of trusting in sheet-iron safes for any purpose whatever. Persons wishing SAFES are invited to an investigation of the many advantages this CHILLED IRON SAFE possesses over all others.
